4 48 Psychosis Sarah Kane

4.48 Psychosis is the final play by British playwright Sarah Kane. It was her last work, first staged at the Royal Court's Jerwood Theatre Upstairs on 23 June 2000, directed by James Macdonald, nearly one and a half years after Kane's death on 20 February 1999. The play has no explicit characters or stage directions; this continues the style of her previous production entitled Crave.

4.48 Psychosis written by the late Sarah Kane was the British playwright's final work, or even a suicide note, if you will. The lines have haunted the theatre scene ever since it was first staged in London during the year 2000, and it was one of the loudest calls to action for mental health of the decade.

2. Adapting Sarah Kane's '4.48 Psychosis' The British playwright Sarah Kane (1971-1999) finished the manuscript for 4.48 Psychosis (Methuen, 2000) just a few days before she tragically took her own life. For this reason, 4.48 Psychosis is in part seen as Kane's discussion and public 'outing' of her own suffering under depression and her contemplation of suicide.

Over the past few months, I have started working on another play in a small group, Sarah Kane's '4.48 Psychosis', which interestingly surrounds the theme of mental illness and clinical depression, a condition that Kane suffered from herself. It was the writer's final play which was performed nearly 18 months after her suicide in 1999. For...
