Lumo Lift should be worn directly below your collarbone, midway between your shoulder and neck. The larger sensor portion is worn underneath your clothes, while the magnetic clasp goes on the outside of a shirt or undershirt to hold your Lumo Lift in place. Be sure to set your target posture each time you reposition it or change your clothing.

Note: Sending thanks to Clare Chapman, Gokhale Method teacher in Bristol, England, who helped research and write this blog post. In today's hi-tech world, people are quick to turn to technology, wearables, and apps to help fix their back pain—and yes, they are right to treat poor posture as the major culprit! But modern ideas about good posture are part of the problem—so do wearable ...
