sometimes known as design for manufacturing or DFM) is the general engineering practice of designing products in such a way that they are easy to manufacture. The concept exists in almost all engineering disciplines, but the implementation differs widely depending on the manufacturing technology.

REQUEST FOR CONCURRENT DESIGN REVIEW PROCESSING

Concurrent design can reduce the time required to develop new products and redesign old ones. In contrast to the conventional approach, in which the product design is (nearly) completed before it is “thrown over the wall” to the process design group, concurrent design for manufacturability, as conceptualized here, conducts a number of progress reviews during the product design process.
